Hörmann VarioDesign for the ultimate in creativity

Hörmann UK have introduced VarioDesign for their LPU42 L-ribbed sectional doors offering the opportunity for even more design choice and the ability to create stylish, customised garage doors. Initially available in Woodgrain and Silkgrain with additional finishes being planned for later in the year, VarioDesign provides the chance to select individual sections of the door to be finished in a different design or colour, to either contrast or be distinct from the overall door leaf.

More than 30 modern Duragrains and 6 classic Decograins are on offer to customise the door leaf, with the number of sections available in the different design depending on the overall door size. Up to 3 different sections are available for customisation in doors with a total of 6 sections, with the personalised sections being able to be located in any position within the door leaf.

VarioDesign is available for doors up to 5000mm wide, with the fascia panel and frame covering being in the same colour as the base door. For those customers who wish to match their entrance door, Hörmann have also introduced the new 878 style in their Aluminium door range for personalisation to create an overall eye-catching and harmonious appearance.
